Drama techniques

freeze frame

Pressing pause on a live performance – usually this is the most exciting moment, or the most dangerous, or the funniest. – You are frozen and stand completely still.

mime

Silently acting a character showing emotions using only the face and body language.

thought tracking

Speaking out the inner thoughts of the character. Usually completed during a freeze frame. Only one character at a time.

narrator

A section of the story is spoken. There may be some action happening at the same time. This is usually spoken directly to the audience.

flashback

The performance jumps back in time to provide the audience with further insight of the narrative.

Also known as cross-cutting.
